Miniature Gladiolus . . .

This ruffled, open type of bloom is nice for floral display as illustrated here.

Hello Again!

In this, our third edition of MINIATURES FROM MAPLETON, we wish to thank our friends and customers who favored us with their orders. Thanks also to those who came to visit and talk gardening with us, as well as those, too far away to visit, who took the time to sit down and write us, not only of new Miniatures, but of their garden experiences as well. Half the fun of gardening is in the exchange of views and experiences, and we always welcome visits, both in person or by mail, from amateurs and professionals alike.

We hope you liked our Miniature flowers in the past; or if you haven't tried them, that you will do so this year, and see if you don't come to feel as we do—that the small things are the true aristocrats of their species.

MINIATURE GLADIOLUS

The demand for good Miniature Glads is growing so fast that we find ourselves hard pressed to keep up. As a result, we've been forced to withdraw altogether a few varieties that we listed last year. However, we're compensating for those withdrawn by adding quite a number of new, and we think, very nice ones this year. But many of our stocks are limited; so it's not just sales talk when we urge that you order early to avoid being disappointed.

Miniature Glads fall naturally into four categories: First, those with wide-open florets, which may be either ruffled or smooth, especially nice for cutting; second, the hooded ones, the progenitors of our modern glads, and to me, the most interesting of the lot; third, the unique "face-ups", in which the tiny florets march up the stems with their faces to the sky, like dainty little lilies; and fourth, the most gorgeous and decorative of all, what we like to call the orchid-type, with petals long and pointed, deeply cut and lacinated, and usually ruffled. These last are perfect for corsages, as well as all other types of floral work.

We have tried in our descriptions to always mention the type, and to give a clear picture of each glad as we see it.

Culture: Miniature Glads require the same culture as the larger glads, namely full sun, good soil, and plenty of water. We like a soil composed largely of leaf mold or compost. Plant in groups or in rows, 4 to 5 inches deep, and give plenty of water when buds start to form.

BABY GLADIOLUS

A race of gladioli fast coming into popularity in the milder parts of the country, where temperature does not fall below 10 degrees F. Blooms are airy and graceful, and lacking in the stiffness usual to gladiolus. For bouquets and corsages they are a delight to professionals and amateurs alike, long being a favorite of florists.

Culture: The bulbs are planted in the fall, in October or November, 4 to 5 inches deep. They need full sun and soil that is VERY WELL-DRAINED and not too heavy. We use no commercial fertilizer, but we do turn under a cover crop each year, and also add as much leaf mold or compost as we can lay our hands on.

Shipping Season from October 1 to November 15

Miniature vs. Baby Glads

There is some confusion among gardeners in the differentiation between Miniature and Baby gladiolus. The Miniatures are small flowered varieties which are planted and tended exactly like the common varieties, but they have a wider range of flower forms. The Baby gladiolus are FALL PLANTED and have characteristically open, graceful flowers like those illustrated above.

POMPON DAHLIAS

The smallest of the Dahlias, ranging in size from tiny blooms an inch across, to larger flowers of 2 to 3 inches. For exhibition purposes, Poms must be under 2 inches. However, many of our nicest Poms are larger than that. These are called the cut-flower type, and for your convenience, we list them under separate headings.

Regardless of size, all Poms are good cut flowers. The blooms are formal and perfect, good keepers, on graceful stems. They are also fine border plants and used extensively for bedding; for the bushes provide a mass of color all through the fall season.

Shipping Season from March 1 to June 1

EXHIBITION POMS

AMBER QUEEN—Masses of small, bright golden-amber blooms, on straight stems. Tall. 45c

DEE DEE—Compact formal little blooms of silvery lavender, on long graceful stems. Bush is tall and spreading, and the perfection of form and unusual coloring make it one of the loveliest. 50c

GLOW—Lovely soft old-rose blooms with undertones of yellow, unforgettable when combined with Pink Star in a yellow bowl. Bush is tall and spreading, with glossy green foliage. 40c

GOLD DUST—A 1948 introduction and Honor Roll Dahlia, with tiny semi-quilled rounded blooms of amber-gold. Everything about this little Dahlia is truly miniature. The blooms are scarcely more than an inch in diameter, the foliage is small and dainty, and the bush is low and compact; yet it is very prolific. 50c

HONEY—Bright golden yellow, edged with cerise red. One of the prettier blends, and a heavy producer on a tall bush. 40c

JOE FETTE—A snow-white Pompon with exceptionally formal and perfect blooms on long straight stems. A heavy bloomer on a tall sturdy bush. 40c

LAMPLIGHT—This Dahlia, which we're listing for the first time, is unique, both for its lovely gray-green foliage, finely cut and lacy, and its unusual little flowers, which are an odd shade of buff-pink, with cream centers. Medium height. 50c

LITTLE SUNSHINE—Small compact flowers of soft amber buff, a few shades lighter than Amber Queen. Prolific bloomer; tall. 45c

MIKE—The low, bushy plant covers itself with blooms. Flowers are small and eye-catching, a deep, brilliant red-orange. 40c

REGENT—Very compact, small round blooms of true purple on straight stems. Keeps exceptionally well when cut. Medium height. 45c

ROSALIE—Another new listing that we like extremely well. Bush is tall and spreading, carrying its lovely soft cream blossoms on fine, long stems. Flowers occasionally have a hint of pink in the center. 50c

SONNEN ROSCHEN—A lovely little flower with tightly quilled petals of golden yellow, faintly tipped with cerise. Tall. 45c
TIPTOP—Small round blooms of bright red, slightly darker than Vivid. Medium height. 45c
VIVID—Aptly named, this tight little bloom of vivid red is so perfectly formed it's almost round. 45c
YELLOW GEM—Considered for years the best yellow Pompon. A clear soft lemon self-color on a sturdy bush loaded with bloom. 40c

CUT-FLOWER POMS

ALLBRIGHT—One of our brightest Poms, a combination of glowing yellow and fiery orange; like a bonfire in the garden. Tall. 40c
BIT O'LILAC—A flower of unusual coloring, cream and lavender, with tips of petals stained lilac. The staining makes this flower unique, for we list no other of like coloration. Tall. 40c
BOBBY—Nice blooms of deep glowing wine on a tall sturdy bush. 40c
CHAMOIROSCHEN—A find of which we are extremely proud, for it's the first true peach-colored Pompon we've had. It varies considerably, sometimes being almost buff, and again deepening in color to soft peach orange. But usually the flowers are true soft peach, which strikes a new and different note in the Dahlia garden. 50c
CYRO—A nice addition to the all yellow group, with larger flowers than Yellow Gem, on a lower bush. 50c
FASHION—Lovely old gold blooms, sometimes with a hint of peach in the center, on a low spreading bush. 40c
IOLANTHA—Large blooms of soft rose-orange. Tall. 45c
JHR. VAN CITTERS—A nice autumn flower of orange and yellow, a good keeper on a tall strong bush. 40c
KOCHELSEE—Though we list this variety for the first time, this year, we already consider it one of the best. A wonderful bedding plant, the bush is low and exceedingly compact and resistant to rain and wind. It has very rich dark green foliage, and a wealth of large bright scarlet blooms, on good stems. 50c
LIBBY ROHR—A florists' favorite of cerise wine, on good stems and a strong bush. Flower is similar to Bobby, but lighter in color, and sometimes smaller. 45c
MARY MUNNS—Another on-the-line variety, with some blooms under the two-inch deadline, and some larger. A very lovely self-color, of shimmering fuchsia-violet. If you like contrast in arrangements, this is perfect with Yellow Gem or Cyro. Or try blending it with Bobby, Libby Rohr, Dee Dee, and Morning Mist, in a silver dish, and win top honors at your fall show. 40c
MORNING MIST—Delicate pale lavender blooms, shading to white in the outer petals. One of the best to cut, with long stems, and blooms of exceptionally even and perfect coloring. 40c
ROSA WILMOTH—Fine for massing, for bush is low and spreading and literally loaded with pure pink flowers. 40c
SPECKLES—An interesting novelty in wine and pink. Some blooms are almost entirely wine, with but a spot or two of pink. Others may be mostly pink, and between the two extremes are all degrees of the two colors. 50c

★ SPECIAL OFFER: 8 Pompon Dahlia roots, our choice, but all different, and each one labeled. $2.75 Postpaid

MINIATURE DAHLIAS

We are slowly building up a stock of good miniatures, and have three exceptionally nice ones to offer this year. Each is one of the best in its class, a worthy addition to the garden and in the house as a cut flower.

Shipped from March 1 to June 1

BISHOP OF LLANDAFF—This gorgeous Dahlia is worth growing on two counts: First, for its brilliant, velvety red blooms of the anemone type, and again for its deep red foliage, graceful and delicately cut, which is the perfect foil for the lovely blooms. 50c

PINK STAR—A frilly little semi-cactus type of warm pink, shading yellow toward the center. Bush is low, with fine foliage. A gay and frivolous little Dahlia we're extremely fond of. 40c

WHITE FAWN—A fine formal decorative miniature of pure white, long a favorite cut flower, and one that our visitors invariably choose. In spite of its fragile coloring, will stand up under an enormous amount of wind and rain. Tall. 45c

SPECIAL OFFER: One root each of 3 above Miniatures.

SPECIES TULIPS

Species tulips are among the most satisfactory miniatures to grow, and of the numerous species, we consider the following four which we are listing this year to be of superior merit. Each one is distinct and different. If you haven't grown the small tulips, try some of each, and see if you don't feel that you've been missing out on something.

Culture is the same as for the large tulips, except that they may be left in the ground from year to year. Give them good drainage and a chance to dry out in the summer.

Shipped from September 1 to December 1

CLUSIANA—The Candystick Tulip, daintily striped in peppermint pink and white. A small, pointed tulip on slender, graceful 15-inch stems.

3 for 50c, 12 for $1.75

KAUMANNIANA—The Waterlily Tulip is well named, for the large spreading flowers of cream white with yellow centers open to the sun when barely above ground. In cloudy weather, the long cylindrical buds stay closed, exposing the warm red blush on the backs of the petals. Eight inches.

3 for 40c, 12 for $1.45

PRAESTANS Tubergans var.—Quite dwarf, the short stems are crowned with several fat, round little tulips in fiery scarlet. A bed of these will add brilliant spring color to the rock garden. 3 for 40c, 12 for $1.45

SYLVESTRIS—Here is a rarity, a tulip with a definitely sweet fragrance. In addition, we think it one of the loveliest tulips we've yet seen. Blooms are a rich golden yellow, opening almost flat in the sun to golden stars. Outside of petals is delicate greenish yellow. Stems are about 16 inches, slender and swaying gracefully with their large flowers.

3 for 40c, 12 for $1.45

SPECIAL OFFER: 3 each of 4 species listed, for $1.40
12 each of 4 species listed, for $5.00

DWARF BEARDED IRIS

Sun Drop

These delightful little iris are charming as edgings for the larger iris beds, as borders for walks and paths, and as bright spots in the rock garden. The blooms are large and showy, yet the plants themselves are true miniatures, seldom over 6 or 8 inches high.

Culture just like the tall bearded iris.

Shipped from July 15 to December 1

DITTON'S PURPLE—A shimmering deep purple self, with small dainty blooms. Six inches. 45c

GLEE—Delicate pale yellow, a nice pastel. Eight inches. 45c

TWO MINIATURE SPECIES IRIS

INNOMINATA—Found in recent years in Southern Oregon, this is an outstanding native species. We offer it as an individual clone, with blooms of deep golden yellow penciled in brown. Flowers are beardless, delicate and lovely, and produced in profusion, in either sun or shade. Grassy foliage is evergreen, dark and glossy. 6-12 inches. Plant in acid, leaf mold soil, and give winter protection in sub-zero climates. Shipped in spring or fall. Each 75c

FORRESTII—A dainty little species from China, with grassy leaves and perky little blooms of clear lemon yellow, penciled in black. 8-12 inches. Any good garden soil, sun, and plenty of moisture in summer, suits this cheerful and handsome little miniature. Shipped in spring or fall. Each 50c

MINIATURE ROSES

We are happy to be able to offer you six varieties of the tiny fairylike Miniature Roses which have so captured the hearts of gardeners everywhere. These wee little roses are so dainty, yet so hardy and easy to grow, that there's no limit to their uses. As edgings for large rose beds; as borders along walks; for sunny spots in the rock garden; as points of interest in window boxes or plant boxes on the terrace or patio—nothing can serve you with more charm than these tiny little roses, perfect replicas of their larger sisters. Nice to cut, too, they're a "natural" for corsage work, or for the miniature section of the flower show.

Sweet Fairy (Pat. No. 748)

Culture: Plant in full sun in good soil. Spray or dust exactly as you do for large roses. Prune very lightly when dormant, removing only dead wood or branches that are too long to look well. These varieties grow from 8 to 12 inches tall.

Shipped Only in the Spring

CHINENSIS MINIMA (Rouletti)—One of the oldest, but still ranks as one of the best of the Miniature Roses, with charming little bright pink, double blossoms seldom more than an inch across. Very hardy and prolific. Each 75c

ESTRELLITA—Dainty little double white blooms about an inch across, usually in clusters. Flowers turn to apple-blossom pink in cool weather. Soft foliage, light green, on a bushlet 6 to 12 inches high. Each 75c

MIDGET (Plant Patent No. 466)—Tiny rose-red, very double blooms on a compact little bush that is almost thornless. Each 85c

OAKINGTON RUBY—A very free-flowering variety from England, with perfect little rose buds of deep crimson, opening to double ruby-carmine flowers. This little rose received an Award of Merit from the English Royal Horticultural Society in 1934, and is still a favorite of all who grow it. Each 75c

PUMILA—Very similar to Rouletti, having the same cheerful little double pink blooms. Chief difference lies in the bush, which is very twiggy and compact and heavily clothed with foliage, making it one of the best for borders and edgings. Each 75c

SWEET FAIRY (Plant Patent No. 748)—A recent introduction, and the first Miniature Rose to give us a true rose fragrance. Dainty deep pink buds opening to soft pale pink, very double flowers on good stems. A fine addition to the Miniatures. Each $1.00

SPECIAL OFFER: 1 each of the 6 varieties listed, for $4.00

UNUSUAL MINIATURES

HARDY CYCLAMEN (Cyclamen Neopolitanum)—A true miniature, with perfect little cyclamen blooms in pink and white. One of the most outstanding small flowers we've seen in some time, with numerous good qualities; among them, intriguing tiny cyclamen blooms, handsome heart-shaped marbled leaves, and a fascinating habit of curling the seed head, as soon as the petals drop, down to the ground, so that the plants are always neat and tidy. They bloom in the fall, when good flowers are scarce, the bloom lasting a month or more. The leaves appear shortly after bloom begins, and persist till spring. Plant the bulbs, which are perfectly hardy, in good leaf mold in partial shade. Keep moist at all times, preferably by mulching. Shipped in August and September.

Neopolitanum—Pink.

Each 50c, 3 for $1.35

Neopolitanum album—White.

Each 75c, 3 for $2.00

FEATHER HYACINTH (Muscari Plumosus)—The Feather or Plume Hyacinth is an odd but interesting novelty, until recently seldom seen. The spikes are about 8 inches tall, often curled and twisted, and set with a mass of thread-like filaments, the whole bloom resembling a giant deep lavender feather. Shipped in August and September.

12 for 75c

GRAPE HYACINTH (Muscari)—Small spikes of soft gray-blue rounded bells, lovely anywhere, but especially nice in drifts with white arabis and yellow primroses. Blooms well in sun or half-shade, in any good soil, and multiplies rapidly. Shipped in August and September.

Dozen 50c, 100 for $3.50

SPECIES CROCUS

These species crocus are miniatures of our giant spring crocus, and have the added attraction of blooming in the fall. There is something uncanny in the speed with which most of these little flowers can bloom, once the tips appear above ground; one morning, just showing—the next, in full flower. In fact, their will to bloom is so great, that most of them, if not planted, will bloom anyway, on the garden shelf.

Shipped in August and September

SATIVUS—The Saffron Crocus from Asia Minor. Blooms are lilac, heavily veined with deep violet, and with showy orange-red stigmata. Blooms in Nov. Dozen 65c

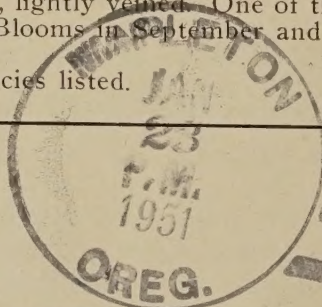

SPECIOSUS ALBUS—Very lovely, snow-white blooms of heavy substance, in September and October. Dozen 75c

SPECIOSUS CASSIOPE—One of the largest of the fall-crocus, with clear, bright blue flowers, blooming in October. Dozen 75c

ZONATUS—Free-flowering, soft rose-lilac, lightly veined. One of the nicest crocus for the garden, and easily grown indoors. Blooms in September and October.

MIXED FALL CROCUS—Includes 4 species listed. Dozen 60c
